RETRACTION

ELECTION RESULTS

On Monday, October 3rd, elections were held to elect the new staff of Lambda. The new Editor-in-Chief is David Quesnel, winning by a close vote over Kevin Daoust by a count of 7 to 6. The position of Assistant Editor was taken by Lisa Sepp, winning by a vote of 7 to 4 over Lynne Anne Vaillancourt. Ed Valtenbergs now holds the position of Sports Editor, winning by a vote of 7 to 4 over Steve Crawford.

The following positions were acclaimed:
Business Editor: Andrew Kovacs;
Entertainment Editor: Angele Serre-Chevrier;
Production Managers: Denis Croteau and Terry Stark.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank Kevin for his work over the summer, and also for taking control of getting the previous issue of Lambda out after the resignation of Patrick Snair.

On September 21st, 1988, Lambda published a piece entitled "Beer vs. Women". The piece was entered in the entertainment section of the paper, and it is apparent to me as new Editor-in-Chief that it was deemed "humorous" by the previous administration and thus inoffensive. It is with great humility and respect that I formally apologize for our action on the part of the Lambda staff and of the ex-Editor-in-Chief, Patrick Snair.

The piece angered many people, and contrary to popular belief, men as well as women were displeased. It is true that the piece is in direct violation to our role here, so aptly summed in our staff box: "Lambda will not print any material which is deemed racist, homophobic, libellous, or in bad taste." In short, the piece had no business here, nor anywhere for that matter.

At this very moment, steps are being taken to ensure that this situation NEVER occurs. There are many dimensions to producing a policy that will not allow this sort of thing to occur throughout yearly changes of administration. Whatever must be done will be done, however, and nothing can't be done.

I assure you, the intelligent reader, that under my administration, sexist, racist, or demeaning material will not be tolerated. And if by some bizarre chance, some act of Satan, a tiny amount of said material appears, the democratic process entitles you to demand and receive action. I am a student here, and I am not omnipresent, but I am not afraid to answer for my errors either.

Some of you who may thrive on controversy, and may hold the opinion that University newspapers are a forum for students to create controversy and rebellion, are missing the point. I firmly believe that you can be funny and arouse intelligent thought without hurting and segregating people. There are forums for you though. There are some groups in the United States, and even a few fixtures of fanaticism here in Canada. But not here. Gone are the days of "National Lampoon" attitudes at Lambda. I hope I've made our position clear, and I thank you for your patience.

DAVID J. QUESNEL
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Lambda Publications

Laurentians Official Student Press

Lambda is the official weekly student newspaper of, by and for the students of Laurentian University. Lambda is funded through a direct student levy by the members of the Student's General Association, and yet is fully autonomous from all University organizations, both student and administrative.

Lambda is a member of the Canadian University Press (CUP) and as a member respects and upholds the CUP Statement of Principles and Code of Ethics.

The Lambda Forum is governed by an open letter policy. However, we will not print any material which is deemed racist, homophobic, libellous, or in bad taste. All letters must bear the authors full name.

Staff membership is open to all members of the Laurentian University community and is contingent upon three published contributions per half term or fifteen hours of volunteer work.

All students are invited to express their views, suggestions and encouragement during staff meeting every Tuesday at 5:30pm.

Local advertising is handled by the Lambda advertising department.

Dear Editor:

I am a 4th year student at L.U. and each year I'm appaled at the amount of litter that clutters up many of the hallways and vending machine areas, especially the one just inside the Science building. This condition generally clears up after the Christmas break, I guess all the slobos flunk out, but in the meantime the place looks awful. I don't know who is responsible for the mess, but I sure wish you people would find a trash can to

It is a general misconception that University students are supposed to be too wrapped up in studies to be able to clean up after put your litter in and not leave it around the u:niversity. I, for one, am sick and tired of moving paper cups and empty chip bags etc., out of the way before I can use these areas. The cafeteria is the cleanest place of all and that is only thanks to the wonderful ladies in there that come behind and clean up after you. I'm sure it is a constant job keeping up with your mess, I've seen the way some of you leave the table and by the way pass right by the garbage buckets and tray rack.

themselves. That excuse seems to be predominant here as well, and I see no clear solution. Female residence areas are usually kept clean through

Try to be a little more considerate of your fellow students, janitorial and cafeteria staff and clean up after yourselves. I'm willing to wager your mothers' all taught you how to use a trash can, and even if they didn't I'm sure you can all figure it out on your own.

Our university has a reputation of high scholastic standards, it's not destroy that reputation a sharing system of taking out garbage, etc... Perhaps greater awareness of the dangers of unhygienic practices and an implementation of a system of controlling these practices would help.

Ed.

Dear Editor:

When the time comes for high school students to make the choice as to what university or college they want to attend, it basically involves researching available resources and then filling out applications. For a student who is disabled, the choices suddenly become very limited. Consideration must be given to details such as the physical accessibility of the campus and the availability of assistive devices (e.g. print enlargers, books on tape) as well as available programs.

Over the past twenty or more years, the number of disabled students applying to univeristy has been steadily increasing and this may be attributed to changing attitudes and greater awareness of the abilities of disabled persons. For a person with a disability to be successful and productive in today's increasingly complex society, accessible education is a must.

Although attitudes toward the disabled are changing for the better, the real question is "are they changing fast enough?" Also do enough people know or even care that there is a problem? An apethetic society is the greatest challenge to overcome if disabled students are going to get a fair chance at being the best they can be.

STEVE KEAN

In respect to changing attitudes concerning the disabled, I wholeheartedly agree. Unfortunately, intitutions such as this one are very concerned about expenditures in relationship to demand. And while the institutions in question are progressive, it is possible that they have difficulty in visualizing the problems you describe. Political pressure does not seem to move quickly enough. Perhaps if you presented your case on behalf of an organization, and came up with some unique ideas designed to make administrations aware of the problem, they may better understand your predicament.

Career Day

On Thursday, Oct. 6th, AIESEC, an International Management Development Organization on campus, sponsored their 4th annual career day. Twenty-one companies and employment services were invited to "bridge the gap between students and the employment world". Participating companies included a wide range of employment opportunities for students in many fields, such as Inco Metals, Thorne Ernst and Whinney, and The Sudbury Regional Police.

Bonnie MacDougall, President of AIESEC's Sudbury local, explained the benefits of Career Day saying that it "assists both the students and the companies in several ways. First, the students can physically talk to some of the recruiters of this nation's leading companies, and get a feel for the competitiveness of the job market. If they're particularly interested in one of the companies attending, they can drop off a resume. First and second year students can also benefit by getting an idea of what courses they would require in order to satisfy a particular employer. At the very least, Career Day de-mystifies the private sector, and brings them to our own backyards.

Secondly, companies can get a feel for the student market of their recruitment in terms of how they fit in with the big corporate picture. And, these people are not amateurs. A ten minute talk with a recruiter can also give them a hint of student concerns for things such as pay, Health and Dental benefits, and relocation subsidies, and they can often adjust to those concerns. Finally, they are not only here to recruit students, but are also present in order to find out what competing companies are offering. In order to get the best recruits, they often match or surpass the other companies benefits package."

MacDougall ended by saying that: "All of those factors produce an environment where students can find themselves in really lucrative positions."

When pressed about concerns of there being too many accounting and banking firms represented, MacDougall was direct. "We tried to get as varied a representation of the job market possible. We had recruiters from Paintbrushers Inc., looking for franchisees, and The Public Service Commission, who were looking for people involved in the Native Studies program. One of the recruiters from Scotiabank has a degree in Psychology. And all of the companies have needs for Research and Development, Advertising and Public Relations, as well as finances. I would say that those claims are unjust. Also in the end, we can only provide the companies that respond to the invitations we send to them during the summer."

All parties concerned agreed that this was the best Career Day held at Laurentian University.

"Get it?" my friend asked me as we left the Odeon. He meant the title. It is pretty clever; and the movie is, indeed, based on products of modern American alienation: urban violence, racism, narcotic enslavement. The survivors of another planet's slave-culture have arrived among us and, after suitable quarantine, have established themselves as a new San Francisco ghetto, where one of their number sets up a racket selling the drug their masters used, back there, to keep them slaves. One sip, they're hooked; properly stoned, they go berserk.

But I prefer the title as written. 'Alien', before xenobiology and the National Enquirer, meant 'foreign', with an overtone of profound cultural difference. It is still used in law to mean non-citizen, and in American law, 'alienage' is one of the classic controlled grounds of discrimination, like race, creed, colour, and sex. It got that status in the context of xenophobic laws and practices directed against West-coast orientals. The Yellow Peril. And that's what Alien Nation is built on.

"They are among us . . ." They've got our shape, only their ears and crania are funny-looking, you can't tell them apart, and their language is utterly unintelligible. They eat disgusting things (not just dogs; spoiled milk and beaver-fur). They live here in tightly-knit urban enclaves. They remember a tradition of what we'd call slavery. They, still, work far too hard; their kids outclass everybody at school. They're not so much grateful for "our" hospitality as ready to take advantage of what sees to them cupidity. And they have an uncanny weakness for a mysterious drug, under whose influence they commit horrendous crimes. They are, finally, an inscrutable menace, and a regular-guy cop assigned to their beat had better keep his back covered and his gun loose in its holster.

The movie thus relates more to "The Year of the Dragon" than to say, "Invasion of the Body Snatchers"—with a twist, the 'buddy' element. For this cop's back is covered by one of Them, a partner more or less forced on him by an affirmative action program and lo—they do become great pals. If Jim Belushi can stomach a commie, why not? We've passed the days of the red phobia "Body Snatchers" used. And as in "Red Heat", what brings our boys together is a predilection for disregarding rules when a bad guy needs shooting, plus the regular-guy cop's perception that, under the skin (swollen cranium/iodeology), the other is not really any different.

Allow me a sigh. It would be nice if these buddies-with-'aliens' things worked, rather, through a growing appreciation of the differences. People are not all American under the skin. But the aliens here have no believable culture to be appreciated; the 'toons in "Roger Rabbit" are a more plausible 'people'. They show enough of the bigot's image of the Chinese a couple of generations ago to tap into that old phobia, but nothing else is added. Under the skin, these guys are indeed American. Like Schwarzenegger's communist. Like Time Magazine's Gorbachev.

It's reassuring. 'We' don't have to adjust, we just have to wait for the real them to emerge—looking like us. Alien nations lose their accents, and learn to save their heritages for restaurants (ex-Stalinists empty haughty waiters). Then, properly alienated, they can watch movies like this one; after all, every inhabitant of an American city shares the demons of violence and drugs.

And the racism? Don't worry. Be human.

ALIEN NATION

Despite its exotic pretensions, Alien Nation is basically the latest in a long line of bi-racial cop-partners-who-became-buddies movies, a scenario used to swat racism since the release of its progenitor, "In the Heat of the Night".

The plot and plot elements are about as hackneyed as you'd suspect. Caan is a bigotted cop (hater of Aliens) whose black partner has just been shot by a 'newcomer' thug. His new partner is the first of the Alien immigrants to Earth to be promoted to detective. The rest of the film revolves around the dual sub-plots of finding the culprit and watching the relationship between Caan and his partner George, grow.

The end results, and most of the scenes along the way, are trite and predictable, but still the movie works; mainly due to the acting of Caan and Patinkin. The scenes where they try to tell each other jokes are both funny and touching, and the development of the relationship is believable (although the pace is forced).

This movie won't change your life, but it's a good couple of hours of entertainment - you won't be disappointed if you go on a cheap night.

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION

Have you ever gone to a party and not remembered exactly what you did? If it weren't for friends to fill in hazy spots you would not know just how entertaining you really were. Casey Jones offers this experience to anyone who volunteers. Fear not: unlike alcohol, he cannot have you do anything that you do not wish to. It is no hypnosis, it is the power of suggestion.

The show is very amusing from the spectators' point of view and in speaking to the participants, it is an enjoyable experience. The volunteers are put through a series of relaxing procedures and then guided through a tropical vacation that goes all wrong. It is all done in good humour and good humour is what the audience sees.

RECIPE BOX

This week I would like to share with you a slightly different way to prepare the classic "hot dog". This dish was developed one night a few years back, when my budget was low and my schedule was extremely hectic. Therefore it is inexpensive and quick. Not only that but it is versatile: you can top it with just about anything. I've scaled down the recipe to a service for one.

- 2 hot dogs
- 1/2 - 3/4 cup mashed potatoes
- topping (choose one)
- 1/4 cup grated cheese (any kind)
- 2 strips bacon
- 2 Tbl bacon bits
- 4Tbl green peppers (chopped)
- 2 or 3 gresh muchrooms (sliced)
- 1 or 2 green onions (chopped)
- 1 or 2 shakes paprika

Slice the hot dogs lengthwise, but not all the way through, so that it will lay flat. Heat on a cookie sheet (lined with foil wrap) at 300 degrees F., while preparing the topping (about 10 min). You can use leftover mashed potatoes or the instant kind. If you are cooking potatoes for this dish, boil one big potato cut up in small pieces for about 15 - 20 min. Cold leftover potatoes work best because you can handle them with your hands.

Divide the potatoe mixture in half and form each half the length and width of the hot dog and place it on top of the dog. Now you can be creative or desperate depending on the condition of your food supply. Bacon should be slightly precooked before either putting on top or wrapping the dog. Aftertopping the dog with one of the toppings suggested return them to the oven (still at 300 degrees F., for 10 - 15 min., then turn the broiler on for 4-5 minutes just enough to brown the top.

You can enjoy these with a green salad, baked beans, soup or just a crusty bun.

CULINARY TIP

Whenever preparing potatoes for a meal (either baking or boiling method) make twice the amount you intend to use for that particular meal. It takes the same amount of time and electricity to bake 4 potatoes as it does 2. Peel them while they are hot, the skins come off more easily. Then when cooled they can be put in a sealed container (margarine tub) or plastic bag (washed milk bag). They will keep for 3 or 4 days in the fridge. Leftover potatoes are great for potatoe salad, fried potatoes of adding to soup.

I hope you'll try this one - Enjoy.

ON A NIGHT LIKE THIS

Could be there again, nowhere
But moving
Standing by the road, thumb out
And hoping
Touching strangers' lives, again
Then going
Living novelty; living
Me alone
And what is it worth to have such an image

What can it be worth to dream of the else
When day upon day I piel the ordinary
When night upon night I build the secure
And what can it matter not taking chances
Why should I mind this social ricochet
When although I may fear the wrong words spoken
I know I can count on some words spoken

Could be lost again, aimless
Uncaring
Staring in windows, hungry
Not asking
Passing through people, again
Yet growing
Living lost or free; living
Me alone

It's a common condition ...

The importance of clean skin is obvious, especially when you are trying to make a good impression. Acne is an unpleasant word, but the symptoms are even less desirable. However, 80-90% of all teenagers experience this condition that produces oiliness and greasiness of skin and scalp, and enlarged pores.

1st Impression Cleanser

Cleaning the outer surface of the skin is the main function of 1st Impression Cleanser. This process allows the skin to breathe more freely and function in a normal manner. Expertly blended ingredients hinder bacteria growth by removing the conducive environment that causes acne.

1st Impression Conditioner

The conditioner penetrates deeply into the skin to remove the sebum (grease) plug, which bacteria feed upon. The plug is emulsified and flushed from the skin through the cleansing process. This specially designed product enhances blood circulation to the cells and bathes the skin matrix cells with needed nutrients.

COACHES FORECAST

The Vees had a very successful recruiting year and are looking to be a strength in the East Division this year. The team is young, with many new faces but contain a lot of strength in the power side and in the middle. With the added strength and additional height (average 6'5") the Vees are looking for a realistic second place in the East Division.

HOCKEY

This past weekend (Oct. 8-9), our hockey Vees travelled to Waterloo to partake in an exhibition tourney. Although Laurentian was defeated by Western (8-3), Waterloo (12-2), and Laurier (4-1), the team still achieved some pre-season tournament experience, which was the main goal of the expedition. Unfortunately however, statistics or comments were not available to Lambda. For the regular season tourney which takes place next weekend, we hope you can look forward to some concrete facts and figures about the games and, of course, to our Vees chalking up some wins.

Alan Clausi

SOCCER

This past weekend the soccer team was at home playing host to R.M.C. on Saturday, Oct. 8, the Vees tied R.M.C. (1-1). Our only goal was scored by Lorrie Owen-Turner on a penalty kick. Lorrie also received another penalty kick but missed the opportunity to go ahead. Another goal was scored by Lorrie but it was called back on an off-side call. Sunday was a much better game for the Vees. The Vees won 4-1 over R.M.C. Our goal scorers were Lorrie Owen-Turner, Roy Soussa, Nick Milanovick, and Augusto Ferreira.

Next weekend the Vees are away. On Sat., Oct. 15, the Vees are in Ottawa playing the Carleton Ravens and on Sunday they are in Peterborough playing Trent.

STERIOD USE AT U.B.C.

VANCOUVER (CUP) -- University of British Columbia athletics are not beyond the controversy surrounding steroids in sports. A former UBC Thunderbirds football player has confirmed the use of steroids in some team members.

"I felt pressured to take steroids," he said, adding many of the team members who "were looking at something further," such as a career with the Canadian Football League, felt the same pressure.

Football coach Frank Smith said he suspected some athletes of taking steroids last year. "I'm quite confident that steroids are not a factor this year...but the problem has not vanished entirely."

Smith said a departmental policy discourages the use of Steroids. He has counselled some returning players whom he suspected were using steroids to enhance their performance.

The Canadian Inter-University Athletic Union, or CIAU, passed in principle this summer a proposal which calls on athletes to agree to random drug testing. Those who refuse will be banned from competition.

The 46-member CIAU, which represents every university in Canada but Simon Fraser, must ratify the proposal at its December meeting. Testing would begin in the spring of 1989.

Educational programs focussing on the risks of steroids use are already being set up across the country. While steroids build muscle tissue, side effects include kidney and liver problems, hypertension, aggressive behaviour and decreased sperm count or menstrual irregularities.

And although many of the players know about the side effects, UBC's Smith said they balance those risks against a possible professional career in sports. He said most athletes acquire the drug from off-campus gyms. "There is one doctor in town who will prescribe them for athletic reasons."

"STROKERS' BOX"

All right! O.K.! That's it! I've had it!!

Ramms has seen a lot of things here at U of S, but nothing like Dave W. last year Dave was bouncing off floors! This year Dave has taken up the less risky sport of bed hopping. Who's next, Dave?

OH! Where are my manners? Welcome back stokers! Hope you all had a great Thansksgiving. There's nothing like home cooking. It's a good thing Ron S. wasn't cooking dinner! If it is anything like his spaghetti, it's extremely well done.

New this fall in fashion are the jean skirt modelled by that fabulous 3rd gold duo, Francine A. and Rachele A. By the way, keep your social calendars open for this year's mid-fall-free-for-all, that being, bierfest 14-15. Congradulations to 2nd Red and 3rd Blue for the best floor parties in a while. The dunk tank did everything but put a damper on the evening. It's just too bad that Terri S. didn't model her two-piece!

Are 1st Brown and 1st Blue in some kind of rowdiness contest? 1st Brown was heard making all kinds of outrageous noises at 4 o'clock in the morning while 1st Blue was heard serenating every female within a two mile radius one afternoon!

And just when I thought everything was morally deteriorating, I found a love story! It seems Joanne M. has warmed the heart of the Iceman.

Well that's it for this edition of Stokers' Box, but ole Blue Eyes will be watching you at this weekend's festivities! Bye!

P.S. This week's $98.00 question is: Is Yvon G. a K.G.B. Agent?

Important Facts About Voting!

The Federal Voting Process For Students

The riding where you vote is determined by where you consider your ordinary residence to be located. As students, you must decide whether you consider this to be your family's residence or the place where you are currently living (if they are two separate places). Make sure you are enumerated in the polling division where your "ordinary residence" is located. Your name should then appear on the Voters' List. If you will not be able to vote on Election Day itself, remember that you may vote in advance or by proxy. TO FIND OUT MORE, PICK UP THIS PAMPHLET AT YOUR STUDENT UNION OFFICE, OR CALL YOUR ELECTIONS CANADA OFFICE.

Student Success - Lunch Hour Discussion Groups

During the Fall term of the 1988 academic year the Centre For Talent Development will be holding a number of lunch hour discussion groups on topics intimately related to student success.

These meetings are designed to provide a forum for informed discussions on topics including time management, memory, reading, note taking, tests, being creative, communicating, and managing stress. Each discussion group will meet between 12:00 Noon and 1:30 p.m. on the days and locations listed below.

The goals of the discussions is to assist students to become more effective as learners thereby increasing their academic success and personal satisfaction. Treatment of subject material will follow the format and approach, with numerous exceptions, as presented in the manual, "Becoming A Master Student", by David Ellis. This book is available at the Laurentian Bookstore. The book is not a requirement for participation in the discussion groups, but it is recommended. Students will find it useful now and later in their academic careers.

Discussion groups will be held on most Mondays and Thursdays between 12:00 Noon and 1:30 p.m. on the following dates and locations:

Time Management	Monday, October 3rd	Conference Room B
Memory	Thursday, October 6th	Room to be determined
Reading	Wednesday, October 12th	L314 (3rd Floor, Library Tower)
Note Taking	Monday, October 17th	Conference Room B
Tests	Thursday, October 27th	Conference Room B
Creativity	Monday, October 31st	Conference Room B
Communicating	Thursday, November 3rd	Room to be determined
Stress Management	Monday, November 7th	Conference Room B

Conference Room B is located in the foyer of the Great Hall, opposite the entrance to the cafeteria.

Room L314 is located on the 3rd Floor of the Library Tower (R.D. Parker Building).
